At Tientam the import amounts to 293,727 pieces against 343,150, and at Cheloe the decrease rocorded in the same article is from 87,800 to 50,500. At the latter port T-Cloths show a servable. Thus at Hankow they dropped from 597,043 to 370,531; at Kinking from 99,259 to 64,018; and at Chinking from during the past four years, from 311,642 in 1872 to 147,630 in the current year. The same may be said with regard to the imports conveyed to the interior under transit passos The same story has to be teld about T-Cloths at Chinking. A uniform decrease through the four years is observable. Shanghai does quarter under review being 1,126,870; against 1,822,759 in 1874. T-Cleths, on the contrary, compare invourably with last year, the ordered. simport standing at 794,136 against 830,946 in the same period of 1874. Ningpo also took fewer Grey Shirtings, the number being 147,648 against 184,700, and 86,105 T-Oloths agamst 131,967 in the year before. At Foochow Grey Shirtings show a decrease of some 5,000 pieces, but T-Cloths balance this with an excess of nearly 7,000. Gazetto:- "Many years ago a statue of Lord Byron was executed by Thorwaldson, at the instance of some admirers of the poet. with the intention of placing it in Westminster Abbey: but the Dean and Chapter of that day refused to admit it on the ground of the irreligious and immoral character of him. whom it was proposed that to commemorate; and the statue lay for some time in the vaults of the Custom-bouse in London. What eventually became of it I cannot now remember, but as I have seen no reference to it in any of the recent discussions of the subject I trouble you with this line of inquiry, thinking that others of your readers may be equally uninformed with myself. I never Ross & Co. had the opportunity of seeing the statue, but it was said at the time to be both an excellent likeness and an admirable work of art. Supposing it still to be available, would the present Dean and Chapter reconsider the question of admitting it into the Abboy as originally desgined?"-" Student" writes to the Times:-"There is a bust of Lord Byron by Thorwaldsen in the Ambrosian Library at Milan, in which the general character of the face is so like the Queen's Road, at present in the occupation of familiar portraits of the poet as to leave no Miss GARBETT. SLEEPING IN WAR. Condé was an excellent sheper : so was the Duke of Wellington: so was Pitt, till his health became fatally shattered; and the power or habit is quite as essential in civil as in military affairs, for without it both mind and body must prove unequal to a strain. One striking exception was Nelson. who, when everything was ready for the attack on Copenhagen, and he was only waiting for a wind, was with difficulty persuaded to attempt an hour or two of rest. He allowed his cot to be placed on the deck and lay down on it, but never closed his eyes a moment; and at brief intervals during some hours, kept anxiously inquiring about the Napoleon or Wellington would have ordered himself to be called when the wind was favourable, and gone quietly to sleep. Yet Nelson was a hero in the brightest acceptation of the word-

COTTON MATHER.

The "Ecclesiastical History of New England" of Cotton Mather is a perfect reflection of the odd, contradictory nature of the man. It shows him in bis strength and his weakwith all his acumen and all his credulity. Notwithstanding his literary skill. of which he was not without a fair measure, Mather was totally devoid of the power of selection. His net dragged high and low, ard took in everything that it found. His book is a heap of heterogeneous materials without law or method, or with only such law and method as still further confuse those who would consult it. With an affectation of learned elegance, he alls the several divisions by such designations as "Polybins." "Sal Gentium," "Thaumaturgus," "Ecclesiarum Prolia," and so on. He distributes his matter into Books, Parts, Chapters, Sections, and Appendices; and yet, with all this accumulation of detail, or perhaps even by virtue of it, he leaves the casual reader almost pathless in the midst of a wild desort of information. History, biography, ahecdote, and sermonising, are jumbled together in one distressing folio Garrulity itself could not be more full of unnecessary particulars; yet sometimes the portraiture is vivid and alive. Cotton Mather was a man of the world, though a waint ; a scholar, though a Puritan minister. He would duote stories from Pagan history to illustrate the lives of his modern Christians; he would chatter about all the odd things he had ever heard, to advance the cause of the true Church in Massachusetts. He could even make his joke upon occasion, after the the guest, with a sense of becoming dewhich survived in America after its decline in England. THE TITLE OF SEYAD. Under the signature of "Hajies" a correspondent of the Pall Mall Gasette explains the meaning of the title Seyad. He says -It seems that the word Sayad, Sayyid, or Seyed has become quite popular among the morning journals as denoting a title of sovereignty. A more absurd notion could not have been conceived, because any man who is familiar, with the term Seyad must know that is means neither more nor less than a descendant of the Prophet Mahommed, and it can never be used as a title of a ruling prince. All the member of Seyad Burghash's family, whether brothers, uncles nophows, or cousins, are styled Seyads, and the appellation, which means "sir," or "illustrious," is not confined to any nation tribe, or people, be they Sooffee, Sheen, or 334 /.) on Local Risks only.
